

Geomorphology in Environmental Management

P.W. Downs and D.B. Booth

'Environmental management' is both a multi-layered social construct, in which environmental managers interact with the environment and each other, and a field of study emphasizing the need for interdisciplinary understanding of human-environment interactions (Wilson and Bryant, 1997). Environmental managers are those whose livelihood is primarily dependent on the application of skill in the active and self-conscious, direct or in-direct, manipulation of the environment with the aim of enhancing predictability in a context of social and environmental uncertainty. (Wilson and Bryant, 1997: 7)

Thus the goal of environmental management is '...to harmonize and balance the various enterprises which man has imposed on natural environments for his own benefit' (Goudie, 1994: 181). The perception of 'benefit', however, depends on the prevailing management vision and objectives for a particular environmental facet (water, rivers, beaches, deserts, etc.) or location. These variables lead to at least five fundamental dimensions to environmental management: the importance of place, implications of scale, situation in time, the cultural context and political framework (Downs and Gregory, 2004).

These dimensions result in considerable scope for social and environmental uncertainty that is largely beyond the realm of this chapter. Instead, we concern ourselves primarily with the 'application of skill' in enhancing the predictability of environmental manipulation from a geomorphological perspective. Geomorphology, as the study of the origins and evolution of Earth's landforms and the processes that shape them, is clearly part of the disciplinary scientific basis of environmental management, and there is a long-standing concern with 'applicable' geomorphology (see Gregory, 1979) that investigates geomorphological processes and resulting landforms under the influence of human activity. Graf (2005) argues that geomorphology has been closely associated with public policy and land-use management in the USA since the late 19th century, especially through Grove Karl Gilbert's studies for the US Geological Survey (Gilbert, 1890, 1914, 1917). While few applicable geomorphology studies occurred through the first half of the 20th century (Cooke and Doornkamp, 1974), geomorphology has both re-connected and increasingly strengthened its association with management applications since that time (Graf, 2005) through process-based studies beginning with Horton (1945) and chapters by Leopold (Leopold, 1956) and Strahler (Strahler, 1956) in the seminal publication Man's Role in Changing the Face of the Earth (Thomas, 1956). By the century's end, Graf (1996: 443) contended that Geomorphology as a natural science is returning to its roots of a close association with environmental resource management and public policy.there is a new emphasis on application of established theory to address issues of social concern.

Despite an extensive literature on the applicability of geomorphology to problems in environmental management, we find few descriptions of
