Forest-atmosphere Interaction Proceedings Of The Forest Environmental Measurements:

The Forest-Atmosphere Interaction B.A. Hutchison, B.B. Hicks, 2012-12-06 The effects of meteorological phenomena upon forest productivity and forestry operations have been of concern for many years. With the evolution of system level studies of forest ecosystem structure and function in the International Biological Program and elsewhere, more fundamental interactions between forest ecosystems and the atmosphere received scientific attention, but the emphasis on meteorological and climatological effects on forest processes remained. More recently, as recognition has developed of potential and actual problems associated with the atmospheric transport, dispersion, and deposition of airborne pollutants, the effects of forest canopies upon boundary layer meteorological phenomena has come under scientific scrutiny. Looking to the future, with rising atmospheric concentrations of CO₂ and increasing competition for the finite fresh water resources of the earth, interest in the role of forests in global CO₂ and water balances can also be expected to intensify. Thus, the nature of forest canopy-atmosphere interactions that is to say the meteorological phenomena occurring in and above forest canopies are of importance to a wide variety of scientific and social issues. Demands for forest meteorological information currently exceed levels of knowledge, and given the economic constraints of science in general and environmental sciences in particular, chances for major improvements in scientific support in the near future are slim. Unfortunately, studies of environmental phenomena in and above forests are costly and logistically difficult. Trees, the ecological dominants of forest ecosystems, are the largest of all terrestrial organisms.

Making Our Forests and Rangelands More Productive, 1986 Fundamental Principles of Environmental Physics Abel Rodrigues, Raul Albuquerque Sardinha, Gabriel Pita, 2025-06-10 This book is an interdisciplinary guide to environmental physics grounded in sound mathematical formulation. Its holistic approach allows readers to gain a more complete understanding of physical processes and their interactions with ecological ones which underpin important environmental issues. The primary focus is on the atmospheric surface layer and topsoil layers. This book interests researchers, students, agronomists, foresters, and urbanist engineers alike. The book covers a wide range of topics within environmental physics, including natural and anthropogenic canopies, including forests, urban or wavy terrains, fundamentals of heat and mass transfer, atmospheric flow dynamics, eddy covariance, and aerodynamic approaches for quantification of atmospheric fluxes, global carbon budget, soil-water relationships, climate change, and the relevance of biochar as a global carbon sink. Each chapter includes solved exercises, numerous illustrations, and tables. This refreshed and updated edition also contains a new chapter on soil-water relationships.
