Philology, 1910 Suppression of the Erotic in Modern Hebrew Literature Nitsah Ben-Ari, 2006 Issues of sexuality censorship and self censorship in the formation of national and cultural identities are a focus of great interest in contemporary literary research This is the first work of its kind to study these combined issues in the context of translated and original Hebrew literature Puritan norms in the area of literary representation of sex and erotica formed in pre state Israel against the contradictory background of Western puritan laws and norms and Socialist liberal trends were basically a result of power over the prevalence of Zionist ideology and the formation of an elitist youth nicknamed the Sabra For several decades a relatively small group of culture shapers dictated an image of sabra puritanism which literature original and translated sought to reflect and express More by self censorship than by any obscenity law enforcement the literary mainstream prohibited banned books and cleansed its repertory of explicit erotica In so doing it pushed literature about sex or sexuality to the margins to flourish in the form of pulp fiction or pseudo medical sex handbooks The puritan expurgating trend enhanced by old fashioned elevated stylistic norms had far reaching consequences Decades of attenuation of the erotic and disdain on the part of professional linguists translators and writers to deal with the issue in the critical period of linguistic and cultural revival resulted in continuous impoverishment and petrification of entire strata in the Hebrew literary repertory Translated literature which could have become a channel for an alternative view on sexuality refuted its potential function of introducing innovative or subversive alternatives well into the 1970s A rebellious awakening in the 1980s and 1990s introduced new norms of erotic presentation especially by women writers but the lacunae in the Hebrew literary repertoire need more time to fill
