

Poetry in Kant's Philosophical Exploration

 Exclusively available on IvyPanda

Introduction

Immanuel Kant is a prominent figure in the philosophical sphere because he coined a few significant concepts, ideas, and interpretations. One of his works, Critique of the Power of Judgment, deserves much attention. Also known as the Third Critique, the book focuses on the subjects of science and teleology and offers an essential analysis of aesthetics (Kant, 2000). This literary piece is additionally worth consideration because it comments on the difference between the beautiful and the sublime and introduces universalism of aesthetic judgments (Kant, 2000). It is possible to apply these concepts to the study of poetry because many people consider this phenomenon an aesthetic representation of literature. Since there is a connection between poetry and ideas from the Third Critique, a suitable approach is to identify Kant's approach to literature, in general, and poetry, in particular.

Main body

The given research proposal is going to answer the following question: How does Immanuel Kant assess the beauty of poetry? Based on this articulation, one can offer a specific hypothesis that will be tested in the thesis. Thus, the proposal expects to identify that the beauty of poetry is an individualistic concept that depends on the judgment of taste. It is necessary to locate and analyze credible information to analyze whether the hypothesis is true.

A few specific arguments prove that the suggested topic is significant. Firstly, Kant is deservedly considered a leading light in philosophy, which denotes that his ideas represent much interest to modern researchers. Scientists try to analyze what the thinker said about various concepts and phenomena to get a better understanding of his overall system of philosophy. Secondly, poetry is an integral element in the present world because it is an effective manifestation of a nation's culture and history.
