

Where I Lived, and What I Lived For

HENRY DAVID THOREAU

Henry David Thoreau (1817–1862) was a philosopher, poet, essayist, and naturalist as well as an outspoken social critic. He was born in Concord, Massachusetts, and was educated at Harvard. He worked at a variety of professions, from land surveyor to teacher to pencil maker. Strongly influenced by his neighbor and friend Ralph Waldo Emerson, Thoreau considered himself a fierce patriot who honored his country and its ideals, if not always its government. He spoke out against the war against Mexico, and slavery — specifically the Fugitive Slave Act — and defended the abolitionist John Brown. He is best known for Walden, or Life in the Woods, published in 1854, which is his account of living in a cabin on Walden Pond for two years. This selection is from the second chapter of Walden.

I went to the woods because I wished to live deliberately, to front only the essential facts of life, and see if I could not learn what it had to teach, and not, when I came to die, discover that I had not lived. I did not wish to live what was not life, living is so dear; nor did I wish to practice resignation, unless it was quite necessary. I wanted to live deep and suck out all the marrow of life, to live so sturdily and Spartan-like as to put to rout all that was not life, to cut a broad swath and shave close, to drive life into a corner, and reduce it to its lowest terms, and, if it proved to be mean, why then to get the whole and genuine meanness of it, and publish its meanness to the world; or if it were sublime, to know it by experience, and be able to give a true account of it in my next excursion. For most men, it appears to me, are in a strange uncertainty about it, whether it is of the devil or of God, and have somewhat hastily concluded that it is the chief end of man here to “glorify God and enjoy him forever.”<sup>1</sup>

Still we live meanly, like ants; though the fable tells us that we were long ago changed into men; like pygmies we fight with cranes;<sup>2</sup> it is error upon error, and clout upon clout, and our best virtue has for its occasion a superfluous and evitable wretchedness. Our life is frittered away by detail. An honest man has

<sup>1</sup>The first question and answer in the Westminster Catechism, a statement of religious doctrine that came out of the Protestant Reformation, is “Q: What is the chief end of man? A: To glorify God and enjoy him forever.” — Eds.

<sup>2</sup>Allusions to the Greek fable of the Myrmidons (ant-people), and to Book III of the Iliad, respectively. The Iliad draws a parallel between the Trojan War and the mythological war between the cranes and the Pygmies. — Eds.
