The image shows a periodic table of elements where every element is represented by a small, colorful card. Each card features a skull and crossbones symbol, indicating that all elements are radioactive. The cards are arranged in a standard periodic table layout on a dark surface. The colors of the cards vary by group, with some groups having a single color (e.g., red for Group 1, green for Groups 2-10, blue for Groups 11-18) and others having multiple colors (e.g., yellow, orange, and purple for the transition metals). The cards are held in place by small metal fasteners at the corners.
