Galatea and Midas George K. Hunter, David Bevington, 2008-07-15 Galatea and Midas are two of John Lyly's most engaging plays Shortly after his early success with Campaspe and Sappho and Phao in 1583 he took up the story of two young women Galatea or Gallathea and Phillida who are dressed up in male clothes by their fathers so that they can avoid the requirement of the god Neptune that every year the fairest and chastest virgin in all the country be sacrificed to a sea monster Hiding together in the forest the two maidens fall in love each supposing the other to be a young man Galatea has become the subject of considerable feminist critical study in recent years Midas 1590 uses mythology in quite a different way dramatizing two stories about King Midas the golden touch and the ass's ears in such a way as to fashion a satire of King Philip of Spain and of any tyrant like him for colossal greediness and folly In the wake of the defeat of Philip's Armada fleet and its attempted invasion of England in 1588 this satire was calculated to win the approval of Queen Elizabeth and her court The plays are newly presented here by the scholars who have recently edited Campaspe Sappho and Phao and Endymion for the Revels series
