

THE UNITED NATIONS
DECLARATION
OF Human Rights

Whereas recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world;

Whereas the Charter of the United Nations proclaims that self-determination, freedom, justice and peace have become the aspiration of common people and that all peoples should live at peace with one another and good will to neighbors and that they should be able to observe the Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man adopted by the General Assembly of the United Nations on 18 December 1948;

Whereas the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man contain principles which set the basis for the realization of the rights and freedoms of all people;

Whereas the purpose of the United Nations is to bring about good will and cooperation among all nations, to accept and observe the obligations which have been assumed by them in the Charter of the United Nations and to work for the promotion and realization of the rights and freedoms of all people;

Whereas the Member States have affirmed their common faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human individual, in the equality of all races and peoples and in the right of all people to be free and secure;

Whereas the recognition of the rights and freedoms of man and woman is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world;

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE UNITED NATIONS proclaims this Universal Declaration of Human Rights as a common standard of achievement for all peoples and all nations, to which all should strive and to the observance of which the individual and the State alike are under a common obligation.
