

— THE — GREAT WAR

Correlli Barnett

On 28 June 1914 Archduke Franz Ferdinand and his wife Sophie were assassinated by a young Austrian student who fired three shots from a pistol at close range. From these three shots and two deaths the violence was to ripple outwards across Europe and then the world in a conflict so terrible, so gigantic, that men were to remember it, very simply, as 'The Great War'.

In The Great War Correlli Barnett traces the conflict from its origins in a Europe wracked with tension, through the years of bitterness, loss and destruction when a compromise peace proved impossible, to the war's bitter end in November 1918. He describes the military campaigns that centred on the need to defeat the main body of the German army on the Western Front, how the British and French were forced to attack there again and again in 1914–17 and why these offensives failed to achieve a decisive victory. He draws lucid character sketches of the leading commanders such as Joffre, Haig, Foch and Ludendorff and outlines the bitter disagreements over strategy between commanders and politicians. Finally, he describes how the massive German offensive in spring 1918 was halted and
