

Diachronic/synchronic – External Linguistics/ Macrolinguistics (acquisition-use of language and culture-society-language connection)

The competence/actions notions by Noam Chomsky.

Saussurean concept of language (Related with Chomsky's competence):

Focused on the ideal speaker/listener (control of language - a homogeneous community).

Languages - autonomous and coherent systems.

In the past: Linguistics focused on microlinguistics, ignoring macrolinguistics.

William Labov:

Regarded as the one who started it with his theories in his empirical works:

1. The social stratification of English in New York City. (1966)
2. Sociolinguistic patterns. (1972)

Sociological methodology – with theoretical implications for Linguistics.

His study – based on empirical work in social context

Objective – mechanism of linguistic changes & structure of linguistic systems.

The first one to put into practice the area of sociolinguistics in the United States.

Peter John Trudgill:

Later in the United Kingdom.

1. The British complement for the secular linguistics of Labov.
2. The social differentiation of English in Norwich. (1971)
3. Sociolinguistic patterns in British English. (1972)

Approaches:

The difference between micro and macro sociolinguistics is that micro-sociolinguistics refers to the research with a linguistic lean focusing on dialect and stylistic/register variation whereas Micro Sociolinguistics looks at issues as to why immigrants keep their native language in some contexts and not in others, or how social identity can affect language.

According to Trudgill:

1. Macrolinguistics focused on the study of the language (large-scale - group behaviour).
2. Microlinguistics focused on the description-analysis of languages (small groups).
 - Macro-Sociolinguistics: It studies what societies do with their languages, such as: attitudes that account for the functional distribution of speech forms in society, language shift, maintenance, and replacement, the delimitation and interaction of speech communities.
 - Micro-Sociolinguistics: It is not that easy to describe the differences between micro- and macro-sociolinguistics in a nut-shell. However, in a simplistic term micro-sociolinguistics explores the ways in which society influences a speaker's idiolect - meaning the specific language of a person - and how people communicate with one another in line with different social variables/factors. On the other hand, macro-Sociolinguistics focuses more on society as a whole, in relation to language. So with micro-sociolinguistics the emphasis is on language; with macro-Sociolinguistics the emphasis is on society.
