

Social/Emotional Development

0-6 Months

Between birth to six months old, babies are likely to reach some but not necessarily all of the social/emotional development milestones below. Please keep in mind that babies will progress in these skills at different rates, so it is important to support them at their unique stage of development.

From birth, babies may:

- feel calm when they hear a familiar voice or when they are being held;
- show interest in a familiar caregiver's face, often looking at it for short periods;
- begin to copy some exaggerated facial movements, such as opening their mouth wide;
- smile when others do or when they are being spoken to.

By four months old, babies may:

- show a preference for people in the family, especially the primary caregiver;
- begin to smile and make sounds to others;
- begin to imitate facial expressions;
- respond to their name by looking up and smiling; they may also begin to respond to words and gestures;
- understand the concept of object permanence.

By six months old, babies may:

- respond to their name and react when they are called;
- begin to use their eyes to identify people and objects by looking out of the corner of their eyes;
- respond to gestures and words;
- smile;
- use their eyes to follow an object and make eye contact with a caregiver.
